DOCUMENTATION OF PGC MEASURES

Development and Testing of Measures. Many of the items come from other large-scale longitudinal studies: Items on family management styles, monitoring, and rules came from the Philadelphia Family Management Study (Furstenberg, 1992; Furstenberg, Cook, Eccles, Elder, & Sameroff, 1999) and from studies by Steinberg (Steinberg, 1981; Steinberg, 1990; Steinberg, Dornbusch, & Brown, 1992) and Dornbusch (Dornbusch, Ritter, & Steinberg, 1991). Items on neighborhoods, communities, and delinquency came from the National, and the Denver, Youth Studies (Elliott, Wilson, Huizinga, Sampson, Elliot, & Rankin, in preparation). Items on family perceptions, mental health, problem-solving, and perceived economic situation came from Conger et al.'s Iowa Youth and Family Study (Conger, Ge, Elder, Lorenz, & Simons, 1994; Conger, Lorenz, Elder, Melby, Simons, & Conger, 1991) as well as the National Study of Children (Allen, Moore, Kuperminc, Bell, 1998). Items on self-concept of ability, values and importance placed on academic domains, and on gender-roles, and peer characteristics came from The Michigan Study of Adolescent Life Transitions (Eccles, Midgley, Buchanan, Wigfield, Reuman, & MacIver, 1993). Items used to assess sense of personal efficacy were developed by Bandura, Cook, and Eccles for the MacArthur Network on Successful Adolescent Development. Most items on family involvement in the school came from surveys designed by Epstein (Epstein, 1990; Epstein & Dauber, 1991). Markus and Oyserman's (Oyserman & Markus, 1990) techniques were used to assess possible selves. A slightly modified version of The Petersen Scale of Pubertal Development (Petersen, Compas, Brooks-Gunn, Stemmler, Ey, & Grant, 1993) was used to assess physical maturation; the Children's Depression Inventory (Kovacs, 1992), Achenbach's Child Behavior Check List for parents only (Achenbach, 1991), a reduced version of the Eating Disorder Inventory for Anorexia Nervosa and Bulimia (Garner, Olmstead, Polivy, & Garfinkel, 1984), and items from Derogatis's SCL-90-R (Derogatis, 1976, 1983) were added at Wave 3 to better measure the adolescents' mental health. Finally, because they were often entering relatively uncharted territory, many open-ended and projective type questions were included to allow for richer responses than possible with close-ended question formats (e.g., questions focused on school climate, parent involvement in school, race and gender discrimination, experiences of race/ethnicity, family management strategies to deal with discrimination, and identity).

At wave 4, we added the Attitude-Achievement Paradox scale created by Mickelson (Items 289, 291, 296-302 of youth self-administered questionnaire; Mickelson, 1990); items from the Multidimensional Inventory of Black Identity created by RM Sellers and colleagues (items 53 a- gg of youth self-administered questionnaire; Sellers et al., 1997); items from BK Barber on parent psychological control (items 110-118 on the youth self-administered questionnaire; Barber, 1996). The items from the MMBI were also used in waves 5 and 6 along with unique items designed by T Chavous to assess college environments.
